Empowering Parents to Build Meaningful Connection and Lasting Legacy

Bring these powerful parent workshops to your school community!
IsraelLINK Generations offers dynamic, interactive sessions designed for parents who want to speak about Israel with clarity, pride, and purpose, to help their children do the same. Each session is built to deepen Jewish values, strengthen historical understanding, and provide families with the tools to nurture meaningful, resilient connections to Israel.

Rooted and Ready

What does it really mean to be a Zionist? This interactive workshop helps parents explore the diverse streams of Zionist thought while building the knowledge, confidence, and language to engage in meaningful conversations. Rather than simply defining Zionism, participants explore the ideas, values, and aspirations behind each approach, giving them the tools to distinguish between them and reflect on what resonates most deeply.

Parents develop a thoughtful, values-based understanding of their own Zionism to determine why they believe what they believe. Participants leave with a grounded understanding of their Zionism and the confidence to communicate their beliefs with clarity, authenticity, and purpose.

The Legacy We Pass On

Our children don't simply inherit our beliefs, they absorb the values we model and the stories we tell. This workshop helps parents identify the core values, middot (character traits), and life experiences that shape their connection to Israel and organize them into a Personal Israel Compass (PIC). Through guided reflection and interactive activities, participants develop the confidence and language to clearly and authentically communicate their "why" to their children, creating meaningful conversations that strengthen Jewish identity and inspire the next generation.

Bridging the Gap

Step beyond headlines and soundbites. This engaging session helps parents explore key moments in Israel's history using four relational lenses: Inspiration, Connection, War/Peace, and the Road to Independence. Participants engage with Israel's complexity and nuance through interactive learning and discussion, filling in historical gaps and gaining the confidence to guide their children through challenging conversations.
Shabbat-friendly*

Learning to Disagree

Jewish tradition has long celebrated respectful debate as a path to wisdom and growth. In this interactive workshop, parents explore the Jewish value of machloket l'shem shamayim, disagreement for the sake of a greater purpose, and learn practical strategies for engaging in meaningful conversations about Israel, Judaism, and today's most challenging topics. Participants leave with tools to model curiosity, respectful dialogue, and thoughtful disagreement, helping their children develop the confidence to navigate complex conversations with empathy, resilience, and integrity.

How to Identify and Respond to Antisemitism

In a time when antisemitism is on the rise and misinformation abounds, this vital presentation empowers parents to recognize and respond to antisemitism, both subtle and overt. Through real-world examples and actionable strategies, participants learn how to advocate for their children, challenge harmful narratives, and create an environment of dignity, safety, and Jewish pride.

Workshop Logistics:
-Each session is 1.5 hours in length
-Sessions are available in-person or virtually
-Workshops can be run individually or as part of a customized series tailored to your school's needs
-All sessions are led by experienced IsraelLINK educators

Ready to bring IsraelLINK Generations to your school community? Contact your IsraelLINK Regional Director or email us at info@israellink.org Learn more at www.israellink.org

Bring these powerful family workshops to your school community!
IsraelLINK Generations offers dynamic, interactive experiences designed for parents and children to learn, reflect, and grow together. Through meaningful conversations and engaging activities, families deepen their understanding of Israel, strengthen their shared Jewish values, and build the confidence to talk about Israel with clarity, pride, and purpose. Each workshop equips families with practical tools to foster lasting, resilient connections to Israel.

Rooted and Ready

Our children learn who they are through the stories we share and the values we live. This workshop invites parents to reflect on their core values, middot (character traits), and the role Israel plays in their Jewish identity. Through creative exercises, participants craft a Personal Israel Compass (PIC) and leave prepared to share a personal Israel story that is authentic, grounded, and inspiring.
Shabbat-friendly*

DIY Zionism

What does it really mean to be a Zionist? This interactive workshop introduces families to the diverse streams of Zionist thought through engaging learning and meaningful discussion. Rather than simply defining Zionism, participants explore the ideas, values, and aspirations behind each approach, giving them the tools to distinguish among them and reflect on what resonates most deeply.

Together, families develop a thoughtful, values-based understanding of their own Zionism. One that goes beyond labels to answer the deeper question of why they believe what they believe. Participants leave with greater clarity, confidence, and a shared language for discussing Israel and Zionism with authenticity, purpose, and pride.

Bridging the Gap

Step beyond headlines and soundbites. This engaging family workshop explores key moments in Israel's history through four relational lenses. Parents and children learn side by side, engaging with Israel's complexity through interactive activities, meaningful discussion, and shared discovery. Together, families fill in historical gaps, explore multiple perspectives, and build the confidence and shared language to navigate thoughtful conversations about Israel long after the workshop ends.

Shabbat-friendly*

How to Identify and Respond to Antisemitism

In a time when antisemitism is on the rise and misinformation is all around, families need the knowledge and confidence to respond together. This interactive workshop helps parents and children recognize both subtle and overt forms of antisemitism through age-appropriate examples, guided discussion, and practical strategies. Together, families learn how to respond thoughtfully, challenge harmful narratives, and build the confidence to stand proudly in their Jewish identity while supporting one another through difficult conversations.
Shabbat-friendly*

Workshop Logistics:
-Each session is 1.5 hours in length
-Sessions are available in-person or virtually
-Workshops can be run individually or as part of a customized series tailored to your school's needs
-All sessions are led by experienced IsraelLINK educators

Ready to bring IsraelLINK Generations to your school community? Contact your IsraelLINK Regional Director or email us at info@israellink.org Learn more at www.israellink.org